

What makes our medical team experts?

Taking advances from elite sport and applying them to schools and clubs.

Our medical team is made up of 50+ clinicians from a range of medical specialties, united by a passion for sport and the benefits it brings. To become part of our medical team, clinicians must have a minimum of 5 years post-qualification experience as well as demonstrable experience in both the sporting setting and with managing head injuries and concussions. Their experience is often in elite sport, with our current medical team having worked or currently working for numerous prestigious teams and events including those listed below, and more.

As with most things in life, experience matters. The average Return2Play clinician case-load is just over 500 appointments per year, with a minimum requirement of 200.

After recruitment, all clinicians follow a training and induction process that includes:

- Completion of bespoke e-learning modules
- 1:1 training meetings including care based discussions
- Shadowing of senior clinician clinics
- Post-clinic case reviews with senior clinicians

Clinicians are then ongoingly provided with:

- Weekly clinical updates from Return2Play's Head of Sports Medicine
- Internal CPD processes including webinars, podcasts and presentations
- Clinical governance as per CQC requirements
- Internal and external referral pathways, including into Return2Play's 'Complex Case Clinics' run by senior clinicians
- Access to an annual Return2Play conference
